

Sakura started as a crayon company in 1921.

By 1924, Sakura invented the first-ever oil pastel that combined oil and pigment and named it Cray-Pas®, a combination of the two words crayon and pastel.

In 1984, Sakura surprised the pen industry with its technological breakthrough invention of the first gel-based ink in the early eighties, Sakura's labs identified the need for an inexpensive drafting tool that used superior pigment instead of low-grade dye inks. The breakthrough came with the discovery of how to reduce the pigment particles to submicron size so that the inks flow evenly through even the narrowest of pen nibs. Today, Pigma ink continues to be the most reliable archival quality ink on the market and is loyally used by architects, scientists, artists, cartoonists, and scrapbookers, to name a few.

MICROPERM

Every facet of fine line detailing and permanence is incorporated into this pen to execute writing in micro-spaces or on unusual and challenging surfaces.

Microperm is used to make precise long-lasting marks on test tubes, circuit boards, diamonds, cellophane, wood and glass, plastic, metal, or wherever there is a need for waterproof ink that will write on nonporous surfaces. Diamond cutters can use Microperm to make minute markings on rough diamonds to insure exact cuts.

IDENTITY PENS

Identify Items with a Special ID!

Hand this pen to your favourite musician, sport, or movie star for signing autographs, photographs or memorabilia. The dual point multi-purpose marker leaves a permanent mark on most nonporous surfaces. One end is for details, with an extra fine plastic point that won't break down. The opposite end is for broader lines, with a tough fiber point built for heavy use.
